Chicage. April 16.

A "different" hotel made its formal bow in Chicago last night.

It was without any fanfare of trumpets that the Blackstone, the big hease on Michigan Boulevard, overlooking the waters of Lake Michigan, made its start. For weeks and months the builders and decorators have been laboring in the big structure. For weeks an army of employes have been drilling constantly in the duties of the various positions.

More than three score cooks under the direction of Gustav Becker, who for seventeen years was the chef of the kitchen in the Holland House in New York, have been getting acquainted with the great kitchens of the Blackstone.

And yesterday when Messrs, Tracy C and John B. Drake, with their Assistant Managers, Paul Gare and R. J. Tompkins, after a final survey, passed the word that the doors were open, the routine began like the movement of a smooth running machine in which every part was perfectly adjusted and in perfect balance. Chicago, April 16, Inspection by Stockholders.

Inspection by Skor-kholders.

The occasion of the opening last night was made the time for the gathering of the stockholders of the Blackstone hotel company, who, with their wives and daughters and sweethearts, filled the main dining room and overflowed into a smaller one. And finally when the excellence of Chef Becker's art had been duly praised they passed out into the parts of the building to the beautiful ballroom and to the ball-cony currounding it, and up and down Art hall with its magnificent hangings and draperies, and into the private diamig rooms adjoining it, then to the floors above to inspect the bedroom suites, with the spiendid appointments, and they said; "What a different hotel!"

"What a different hote!"
The Blackstone is to be, in fact it already is, one of the landmarks of Chicago. It has a frontage on Michigan Boulevard of eighty feet, just north of Hubbard Place. It towers 260 feet above the street level, the the street level, the street level is the street level. has taken its position as one of the most has taken its position as one of the most prominent features of the great sky line on Michigan Boulevard. It is the first building to be seen from the boulevard, and from the lake it stands out alone, proud and beautiful. The out alone, proud and beautiful. The slanting rays of the late afternoon sun or those of the early morning bring into those of the early morning bring into especial beauty of lines of the green tiled roof. The surroundings, with the view across Grant park looking on to the waters of the great lake, are not surpassed by any hotel in the United States.

Interior Is "Different.

But the way in which it is 'different' ies in the interior. The main entrance to the Blackstone is on Hubbard Place. There is a carriage entrance on Michigan Boulevard. There is an entrance on Hubbard Place leading directly into an electron which lifts the guests directly to the ball-room floor with its dressing rooms for men and women, permisting them to attend a ball or recention in the local and be entre by ball or reception in the notel and be enter tained in the private dining rooms without naving to pass through the main today of the hetel or to appear in the halls or promenades.

There is nothing gaudy about the Blackstone. No one will ever say "gingerbread" on entering any apartment of the establishment. It is not gay with gilt or tinsel it is not gargeous in the common use of that term. The ballroom, the main corridor, the private dining rooms, the main dining rooms all laws the quiet elegance that comes from prefect tasks.

The main lobby is paneled in French walnut. The ceiling is of old ivory. It is of the period of Louis XVI. The draperies, all
